Biographical Sketch

Edward D. Taussig was born in St. Louis, Missouri on November 20, 1847 to Charles and Anna Taussig, who emigrated from Austria in 1840. His father was a wool broker. Taussig entered the Naval Academy in 1863 and graduated in 1867. His schooling was interrupted by the Civil War, where he had duty in the USS Macedonian. From 1868 to 1870 he was assigned to various ships of the Pacific Squadron. Midshipman Taussig was in the USS Wateree during the earthquake in Arica, Chile in 1868 where he assisted in disaster relief. Subsequently, he served under Admiral George Dewey in USS Narragansett surveying the California coast.

Taussig was in Newport, Rhode Island from July to October 1874 where he received instruction at the Naval Torpedo Station. He served with the Panama Inter-Oceanic Canal Survey in late 1874 and 1875, then took command of USS Relief at the Navy Yard in Washington, D.C., where he also briefly headed the Department of Yards and Docks.

Taussig served in USS Juanita and USS Monongahela in 1876 and 1877. He transferred to USS Trenton, flagship of the European Squadron, and served there until 1880. His next three year assignment was at the U.S. Naval Academy, followed by command of the McArthur and the Hassler, coast survey steamers that conducted hydrographic surveys along the California coast.

In 1886 and 1887, he was in the USS Jamestown, a training ship. For the next three years he was assigned to the Bureau of Navigation and had additional duty at the library and records office. In 1891, Taussig was involved in managing the government exhibit at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago. He remained in that post until 1893. Following that, he was executive officer in USS Atlanta, USS Richmond and USS Modnadmack until 1896.

Taussig served in the Hydrographic Office and as Hydrographic Inspector for the Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1897. In 1898 he took command of USS Bennington and went to Hawaii and Guam. On January 17, 1899, he took possession of Wake Island for the United States. After that, he returned to Guam where signal stations were set up and a port survey was conducted. The ship was then ordered to the Philippines where insurgents were trying to wrest control from U.S. troops.

After being detached from the Bennington he became inspector of the Thirteenth Lighthouse District. In June 1900 he took command of USS Yorktown on the Asiatic Station. In 1901, he returned to the United States as ordnance officer at the Boston Navy Yard.

In 1902, he took command of USS Enterprise, then served as captain of the Navy Yard at Pensacola, Florida. Taussig then served in the USS Independence, the USS Massachusetts and the USS Indiana.

Taussig was named captain of the Yard, Navy Yard, Norfolk, Virginia and reported for duty with the General Court Martial at Philadelphia. In 1907, he was assigned as commandant to the Navy Yard and Station, Norfolk, Virginia. He retired as a rear admiral on November 20, 1909, after serving in the navy for forty-six years. During World War I, Taussig was called to active duty for five months as commandant of the Naval Unit, Columbia University. He was relieved of active duty in January 1919.

Rear Admiral Taussig died on January 19, 1921 at the Naval Hospital in Newport, Rhode Island. His son, Joseph K. Taussig, served in the Navy for forty-six years and retired as a vice admiral.

The admiral's medals include the Civil War Medal, the Spanish Campaign Medal, the Philippine Campaign Medal, and the World War I Victory Medal. A destroyer (DD 746) was named in his honor and sponsored by his granddaughter, Ellen Taussig, in 1944.
